

RISK EVALUATION FOR HEALTH HAZARDS IN ACCORDANCE TO SINGAPORE'S RISK MANAGEMENT 2.0

Overview

To encourage companies to assess the health risks and hazards at the workplace, the Ministry of Manpower, Singapore and the Workplace Safety and Health Council (WSHC), have enhanced the risk management framework with the new framework termed 'Risk Management 2.0' (RM 2.0). This framework was launched in February 2015 during the recent bizSAFE convention.

Included in the revised code of practice on WSH Risk Management is a new section on Risk Evaluation for Health Hazards. A proper risk evaluation approach for health hazards is essential for quality WSH risk assessment. For example, to properly evaluate the severity level of a chemical hazard, one will need to consider factors like its intrinsic hazard, chemical properties, level of concentration and possible routes of exposures. When assessing the likelihood, frequency of exposures, amount of usage, method of handling, duration and possible cumulative exposures are amongst the factors to be considered.

Objectives

This short talk introduces the important concept of risk evaluation of various health hazards. Attendees will understand the various risk factors of respective health hazards and the various approaches of risk evaluation.
